

Dakota, Malachi, TaraBeth

The kids have started school again. All three are in full day, that is a huge change for them and us. The prayer that this will be there last year in Port Jervis public school. Are we communicating with the teachers enough? Thinking more specifically to the transition from school here to school in Costa Rica and what that change will look like. How can we prepare the kids for the change?

Heather

She is working full time at the church as a huge blessing. Even that is a place of change. My focus is on how can I set up and grow ministries that will last past my season there. How can I cultivate healthy programs that will function as there is a transition in leadership when God opens the next door of language school? I sit and look around our house and I begin to change my perspective. Instead of looking at our home and our things, I wonder and contemplate how important those "things" are. What really makes our home, aka what will make the trip to Costa Rica, and Colombia.

Isaiah

He now has full days to itinerate, traveling is easy as all the kids are in school. Change is happening as we focus more intentionally on making and meeting new partners to come along side us in what God has called us to. God has used this time to give him new dreams and visions and ways to tell more people about our call to Colombia. Of course, coffee is the center of most of that.

Fall is upon us! Fall is season where the leaves change. They begin to turn beautiful colors of red, orange, and yellow! The weather begins to change. Cool air is not just for the night but the days become chillier. I love the fall. I love it more now as change is not just happening around us but also in our lives.

We are continuing to trust God for His timing in us leaving for the field. We are realizing this season of waiting is really a season of change. Although it is a season of change, God has met us faithfully at every step. He has opened doors that weren't even on our radar! As you enter this season of change, fall, what is God changing in your life? Trust Him, He is GOOD!

The places we've been!

- We were honored to present the University of Valley Forge with the Colombian flag, as alumni going to serve there.
- Also at UVF, we had fun getting to know the students as part of missions convention!
- We were part of sectional Leadership meetings across NY.
- We held a WHY party for family and friends near Saegertown PA.
- Isaiah had the honor and privilege of preaching at his home church.
- We were privileged to travel to Virginia, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and many churches in New York.
